Says Economy Climb Due in Middle of 58

WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower's top economic adviser in testimony published today predicted the economy will resume its upward climb around the middle of the year. The forecast came from Raymond J. Squire, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers. Squire testified on Jan. 16 before a House Appropriations subcommittee considering a $375,000 appropriations request to finance the work of his office. At the same time Budget Director Percival P. Brundage commented predictions by government economists of when the slump will end range anywhere from immediately until next fall. Brundage's estimate is July 1. Meantime, a private economist said Congress and the administration should be ready to cut taxes "substantially" worse. The recommendation was made by Herbert Stein, research director for the Committee for Economic Development, in testimony prepared for the Joint Congressional Economic Committee. He emphasized that his comments were his own and not necessarily those of the private research organization. Stein said President Eisenhower's annual economic message calling for labor and industry restraints on wage and price increases was much too general in nature and would have been less disappointing with "more candor and more clarity."

FCC Official Returned Fee as Probe Starts

By NEIL MacNEIL

WASHINGTON (UP)—Chairman John C. Doerfer of the Federal Communications Commission testified today that after Congress began investigating the commission he returned $165.12 he had accepted from an Oklahoma City television station. Doerfer insisted that the payment, for travel expenses he never had, was all "in mistake." He received it in 1954 and returned it two weeks ago. He told a House Commerce subcommittee he had been under the impression until recently that the payment was for travel expenses for himself and his wife to Oklahoma City, where he dedicated a TV tower. Actually, the television station already had paid for the airline tickets. Subcommittee Counsel Bernard W. Schwartz said that the $173.12 check, which Doerfer had cashed, constituted a "tripling up" of "expenses" for a 1954 trip from Washington to Oklahoma City, Spokane and back to Washington. Schwartz said Doerfer had collected expense money from the government, the National Association of Broadcasters, and the Oklahoma City Station, KWTU, for the trip. Doerfer denied that. He said he had done nothing for which he should have a "guilty conscience." KWTU paid traveling expenses for Doerfer and his wife from Washington to Oklahoma City. The government paid traveling expenses for Doerfer only on the rest of the trip to Spokane and back to Washington.

Ike, Advisers Discuss Forming Space Agency

By DAYTON MOORE
WASHINGTON (UP)—President Eisenhower discussed with legislative and scientific advisers today whether to set up a new civilian space agency or keep all missile-satellite development in the military. The President discussed the question for two hours and 10 minutes with Republican legislative leaders and his chief scientific adviser, Dr. James R. Killian. The issue has become one of growing importance on Capitol Hill where Congress has yet to make up its mind whether to make space developments a Defense Department or a civilian responsibility. Some congressmen want to limit the Defense Department's space role strictly to weapons and to put remaining scientific, space development in the hands of a separate civilian agency. Urge More Funds. Some Senate Democrats, meanwhile, made it clear they will try to force the administration to step up its missile-firing submarine and H-bomber programs. They went along in the Senate's unanimous approval late Monday of President Eisenhower's request for $1,200,000,000 in extra funds for missile programs. Strategic Air Command defense, and a start on a missile detection system. But they said the President should have asked for more. Points Way to Education Threat

By DELOS SMITH

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UP)—The answer to the threat posed by Russia's scientific advances in education from the kindergarten to the grave. This was the apparent conclusion reached by some 200 leading scientists and educators at a two-day conference at Yale University sponsored by the President's Committee on Scientists and Engineers and the William Benton Foundation. The conference was called to discuss methods of mobilizing America's "human resources" to meet "the scientific challenge" of Russia. The scientists agreed that one of the most pressing needs is to improve the general level of knowledge among Americans. The Rev. Laurence J. McGinley, president of Fordham University, New York, said the answer was "a better education for all," not education directed only at science but "education across the board." Dr. Harrison Brown of the California Institute of Technology told the group Americans were trying to meet the extremely complicated challenges of their world with "Stone Age answers." To them, he said, the Soviet threat is what the beast was to Neanderthal man. "We're not well enough educated to survive in our world," Brown said. Our understanding has fallen below the minimum needed for survival.

Wants Early Ruling on Gas Rate Increase

By CHARLOTTE MULLTON
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Justice Department said today it hopes the Supreme Court will expedite a ruling on the legality of gas pipeline rate increases totaling many billions of dollars.

The court is reviewing the case which has brought chaos to rate-making by the Federal Power Commission.

Under normal procedures, arguments would not be heard until the next term of court. But the department feels an early decision is of the utmost importance to both the industry and the commission.

Pipelines may have to refund large sums to their customers if the commission's rate-making method is thrown out. They also will be subject to more cumbersome procedures under which rate increases may take years to bring about.

The main question given the court Monday is whether a pipeline rate increase may become effective pending a final ruling by the FPC without the consent of all the companies concerned.

Monday Justice William Brennan Jr. held for a unanimous court that the National Labor Relations Board may block recognition by an employer of a union he has illegally assisted until the union wins a majority vote of the workers.

Brennan said the election does not have to be board conducted, however, nor does it necessarily have to lead to board certification of the union as a collective bargaining agent. He said the significant thing is that employees choose their unions "in the privacy and independence of the voting booth."

Monday the court also refused to examine the government's Smith Act case against five Communist Communists, whose convictions were reversed in a lower court.

Russia Called on to Explain Intentions

By WILLIAM GALBRAITH
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UP)—The United States called on Russia today to be more explicit about its intentions on outer space control and "summit" talks.

Administration officials made it plain a White House statement Monday night was not intended as a rejection of Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin's latest letter to President Eisenhower.

Rather, they said, the statement was intended to smoke out Russian aims in hopes of paving the way for talks with real prospects of easing major East-West tensions and halting the arms race. The latest step in the American strategy was a White House statement Monday night which made three main points: (1) There is nothing new in Bulganin's "negative" letter; (2) The letter will be "further considered"; and (3) "Further clarification of the Soviet position will be necessary" before this country can decide whether Moscow's proposed chiefs of state "summit" conference holds "good hope of advancing the cause of peace and of justice in the world."

Presidential Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said the statement was not in Eisenhower's own words — indicating the President will reply directly to Bulganin at a later date.

recession was the presentation of a charter to the Blackfish Lake Lions chapter.

As in several recent speeches, the governor quoted widely from Thomas Jefferson on the independence of states.

Faubus said the Jefferson "rule of majority, once ignored, leads to force, which leads to military despotism."

The governor said Little Rock was "a perfect example of what Jefferson was talking about."

Faubus charged that during the height of the Little Rock crisis, the federal government "made frequent use of wire-tapping against our citizens."

"We know this was done," he said, "but we cannot prove it." Faubus, introduced by Richard McCulloch, Sr., a Forrest City attorney who drafted the segregation laws passed by the 1957 Legislature, was interrupted several times by standing ovations.

Faubus charged he found "four complete falsehoods" in a series of newspaper articles which ex-Little Rock mayor Woodrow W. Mann wrote on the segregation crisis.

One, the governor said, was that he knew the school board's gradual plan of integration and the mayor's plan for handling the situation before school opened last September.

Faubus said the Central High problem has not hurt the state's industrial program.

"We have more industrial prospects now than ever before," he said.

Frigid Wave Grips Much of Nation

By UNITED PRESS

Frigid weather gripped the eastern half of the nation today, hitting northern Florida with another bout of freezing temperatures.

Snow flurries persisted in the Northeast and extended south to the mountains of North Carolina. Ice and snow-packed roads forced the closing of schools Monday in Virginia, North Carolina, West Virginia and Tennessee.

Heavy snows blocked some roads in the Tennessee Smokies and the North Carolina mountains. Four-foot drifts choked streets in Boone, N.C.

Near and below zero readings chilled northern New England and portions of Wisconsin and Illinois during the night.

Overnight temperatures plunged into the teens as far south as North Carolina and to below freezing throughout most of northern Florida. Freezing temperatures also hit Alabama and Georgia.

Scattered snow flurries swirled across the Great Lakes and the East during the night, with the heaviest accumulation of about two inches in western New York state.

Wind gusts up to 40 miles an hour whipped up clouds of snow in portions of Pennsylvania and northern New York, and winds of more than 60 miles per hour blasted Roanoke, Va.

A warming trend overspread the nation's customary "ice box," the Plains States and Upper Mississippi Valley, early today, boosting temperatures by an average of 15 to 20 degrees in the eastern Dakotas and Minnesota.

Other readings ranged from the 20s in southern Montana to the 40s in parts of Washington and Oregon and near 60 in southern California and Arizona.

Rain pelted scattered areas of the West Coast and light snow extended eastward across the Plateau. The heaviest rain was about two thirds of an inch in the Los Angeles area.

Forecasters predicted continued cold in the East today with snow flurries in the lower Great Lakes, northern New England and the mountains of North Carolina. Fair skies were expected in most of the southeastern portion of the country.

Occasional showers were seen for the Pacific Coast with showers or snow in the Plateau and scattered snows in the Rockies. Milder temperatures were predicted for most of the Plains and the Mississippi Valley.

Father Held in Death of Son

BENTON (UP)—Police held the father of a 29-year-old Benton man for questioning today following a coroner's jury verdict Monday that the son died Sunday "by the hand of person or persons unknown."

Saline County Deputy Sheriff Parker Johnston said T. C. Gettlin was being held on an open charge. His son, Harold Gettlin, was found in a rocking chair at the Gettlin home with a 22 caliber rifle between his legs. He had been shot in the right temple.

The elder Gettlin testified in the hearing that no arguments recent, though in the past, "we had it up and down."

The father explained a large recent scratch above his left eye as having been caused by raising up and hitting his head on a food trough while feeding hogs Saturday night. He testified that he believed his son "killed himself."

Scratches were found on the victim's face and elsewhere on the body.

Johnston said additional laboratory reports are awaited.

William F. Knowland said President Eisenhower probably will start submitting recommendations on reorganization of type defense establishment to Congress in mid-March. He said Killian reported at length on the American program for outer space vehicles, giving the GOP leaders information they had not had before.

At about the same time, Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin was proposing before a House subcommittee creation of a United Nations satellite inspection system to "guarantee peace."

If that can't be arranged, Gavin said, this country may have to develop technical means to keep Soviet satellites from traveling over free-world areas.

At the White House, Knowland left open the possibility that the administration might ask for additional funds for space and missile development. He said no definite conclusions were reached today, however.

Knowland also said that Killian will make a later and more definite space report to the President, which probably will be relayed to the GOP congressional leadership.

Judge Williams also overruled an attempt by the state to have the cities and counties post bond while the case is appealed. Earlier, he refused to dismiss a temporary injunction which prevented enforcement of the act and extended it to a permanent injunction.

Twelve witnesses testified for Little Rock, North Little Rock and counties which joined them in fighting the law. One witness was Little Rock's new city manager, Dean J. Dailey. He told the judge the law would cause considerable financial problems for the city.

Judge Williams wouldn't let State Sen. Robert Harvey of Swiftton testify about preliminary studies made before the law was passed. The chancellor said it spoke for itself.

Kick Out Reds, Indonesia Told

TOKYO (UP)—Anti-government forces from Indonesia have presented an ultimatum to President Sukarno to kick the Communists out of his government or be overthrown. Indonesian sources disclosed today.

The ultimatum was the climax of a series of cloak and dagger moves by the so-called "young colonels" clique which trailed Sukarno to Tokyo to present their warning. It came amid rumors of a plot against Sukarno's life.

The ultimatum warned Sukarno that the organization for a rival anti-Communist government was created at a meeting of rebel political and military leaders in Padang, Sumatra, last month.

Presented by Attache
The Indonesian sources said the actual ultimatum was presented by Col. Warouw, the Indonesian military attaché to Peking, who met Sukarno in the Japanese government guest house in Tokyo Monday.

The meeting opened with prayer by the chairman of the business session and Mrs. Ralph Routon gave the lesson taken from Chapter 3 and 4 of the book, "Such a Lord." Mrs. Stith Davenport closed the meeting with prayer and the hostesses served coffee and cake during the social hour to 13 members.

Miss Alice Coffee Becomes

Bride of James R. Benson

Miss Alice Lenora Coffee daughter of Mrs. Carl Glen Coffee of De Ann and the late Mr. Coffee and James Richard Benson son of Mr. and Mrs. Helmer Eugene Benson pledged their marriage vows Sunday, February 1, 1938 at the First Methodist Church with Rev. Virgil D. Koeley officiating.

Wayne Smiley, organist, provided a program of nuptial music and accompanied soloist, Miss Colleen Coffee of Shreveport, sister of the bride, who sang, "All the Things You Are" and "Till".

The bride given in marriage by her brother, Jack, was attired in a blue street-length dress fashioned with a round neckline and outlined with lace. The taffeta skirt had a chiffon overskirt with a satin cummerbund. She wore short blue gloves and matching hat enhanced with roses and a tiny veil. Pearl earrings and necklace was the bride's jewelry. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley centered with a white orchid.

The impressive double ring ceremony was performed before an altar decorated with floral baskets of white stock and seven branched candelabra.

Maid of honor, Miss Nell Coffee of Shreveport and sister of the bride was dressed in a pale rose dress made on princess lines with three-quarter sleeves and full skirt. She carried a crescent bouquet of cerise feathered carnations.

Don Bailey served as best man. Charles McCorkle and Bill Schooley lighted the candles and also served as ushers.

Following the ceremony the couple received their friends in the foyer of the church, and the guest book was in charge of Mrs. Murel Hudson of Shreveport, sister of the bride.

For travel the bride wore a blue tweed suit with matching accessories and pinned the orchid from her bridal bouquet at her shoulder. After a wedding trip to Galveston, Mr. and Mrs. Benson will be at home in Warrensburg, Missouri, where the groom will be stationed with the Whiteman Air Force Base.

Though American women are said to have the prettiest legs in the world, there is really no typical American type. The girl who's the outdoor type (left) will pick hosiery in service weight because it stands up to an active life. The sophisticated woman (left center) has a definite preference for seamless stockings that are both sheer and elegant. Teen-agers (right center), like the outdoor girl, show a preference for service weight hosiery for everyday wear. And the mature woman (right) picks sheer, full-fashioned stockings that give her legs a tapered beauty. Yet, anyone of these women will also buy other stocking types to meet her wardrobe needs. And all of them will buy pastel hosiery this spring.

Spoil Your Man All You Want to
It's You Who Will Live With Him

Dear Dorothy Dix: Along with my bridal shower, my friends gave me a good deal of advice. Most of it I automatically discarded. One piece, however, has me in a dither. I love my fiance deeply, and am inclined to spoil him. My friends say I'd be making a big mistake if I continue. They tell me if I pamper him I'll end up being his slave. Do you think this is true?

BEVERLY
Dear Beverly: It depends on what you call "spoiling." Certainly you don't want to make a doormat of yourself, but husband-spoiling is a wife's best bet. Whether he admits it or not, every man likes to be the household pet. He likes a bit of catering and, after all, if he's a kind, considerate, generous husband, he's certainly entitled to it. If your fiance is the sort who'd take advantage of your tendency to pumper, he's not a fit husband for you. Listen to your friends, for the sake of courtesy, but come to your own conclusions.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My problem: Which of two boys should I marry? Bill and I had agreed to get married when I graduate but for the past month he hasn't written, called or come to see me. So, I've fallen in love with Earl. He wants to marry me this summer, too. However, whenever I hear someone mention Bill's name, I think I'm still in love with him. WINNIE

Dear Winnie: When love comes and goes so easily, it's best to wait until you're absolutely sure before marriage. Marriage is for keeps, and you can't risk it with someone you've fallen in love with overnight. Take your time, Winnie; that's one thing of which you have plenty.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Gene and I went steady for a few months then broke up. I know I'm still in love with him because every time I see him my heart goes into my throat and I'm all a dither. I know he doesn't like me because he's going steady with another girl. How can I win him back?

JEALOUS
Dear Jealous: Turn off your jealousy and turn on the charm. That's the only thing short of mayhem that will work, but it's a winner in many cases. While you are waiting for it to work, don't neglect the other boys, either—just in case!

Dear Dorothy Dix: My boy friend and I broke up three months ago over a misunderstanding, which I explained to him. He still calls me up, but won't ask for a date. I think he's afraid of being refused.

JANE
Dear Jane: Haven't you a birthday coming up, or some other occasion that calls for a party? Invite him the next time he calls. If he refuses cross him off your list. If he accepts, Hallelujah!

Rapes, Beatings, Suicide in New York Schools Bring Plan to Combat Wave of Crime

NEW YORK (UP)—city and school officials today drafted a plan of action to combat crime in New York's public schools.

A six-man committee named by Mayor Robert F. Wagner announced it had completed the "first phase" of a long-range program that will be submitted to the mayor for final review before being turned over to the Board of Education later today.

A grand jury that has been investigating violence in city schools resumed its inquiry this morning. It planned to hear testimony about the Bureau of Child Guidance.

The mayor's committee resulted from a climax of school crime that has included two rapes in school buildings and a series of beatings and other juvenile outbreaks. Suicide of a junior high school principal last week led to a bitter clash between the grand jury and the Board of Education.

Details of the new anti-crime program were not revealed.

William R. Peet, the mayor's executive secretary and member of the committee, said the group had prepared a 500-word program of specific recommendations based on suggestions made at a conference Monday between Wagner and school board officials.

Peet said he expected the board to disclose the plan late today or Wednesday.

Kings County Judge Samuel S. Leibowitz, to whom the grand jury investigating school reports, had urged a conference of city officials, school board members and newspaper representatives to plan anti-crime moves.

But Wagner restricted the committee to school officials, his executive secretary and the deputy mayor.

Hot Springs Group Studies Budget

HOT SPRINGS (UP)—The city council finance committee received the city's 1938 budget of nearly $760,000 for steady Monday night.

Copies of the record budget were distributed by city clerk Emmett Jackson to the committee before formal submission to the full council. The estimated budget is an increase of $65,781 over the 1937 budget. The city payroll is set at $681,170, an increase of $12,000 over the 1937 figure.

Mayor Floyd Housley attended the council meeting Monday night, the first time since November when he suffered a heart attack.

Slayer of 11 Faces Former Murder Charge

LINCOLN, Neb. (UP)—Confessed mass killer Charles Starkweather faced arraignment today on a first-degree murder charge, but authorities were uncertain what charge to lodge against his 14-year-old girl friend.

They questioned Carl Eugene Schaeckle Sunday and Sunday night in an attempt to get a written statement from her.

County Atty. Elmer Schaeckle said Carl also would be arraigned to return the first degree murder charge already filed against her or file some other charge.

Both Carl and Starkweather, 10, were charged originally with the sex murder of Carol June King, 16. The bodies of the King girl and her boy friend were found last week in an abandoned steam cellar. The girl, a pretty high school cheer leader, had been the victim of an "unnatural sex act," pathologists said.

Starkweather, a red haired marksmen, signed a 213 page statement Sunday night admitting 10 murders in Nebraska. The young hoodlum also has admitted an 11th slaying in Wyoming.

Schaeckle said Starkweather made a number of changes in the transcript before signing.

Sheriff Merle Karnopp, who witnessed the signing at the Nebraska Penitentiary, said the youth dictated a detailed confession about each of the murders in his five-day killing rampage last week.

Karnopp said Starkweather admitted his first victim was Robert Colver, 21, a service station attendant, who was killed last Dec. 1 with a shotgun blast in a murder-robbbery.

Authorities said he also admitted murdering Carl's mother, step-father and half-sister, the King girl and her boyfriend, a 70-year-old bachelor farmer near Bonet, Neb., a prominent Lincoln industrialist and his wife and maid, and a traveling salesman slain near Douglas, Wyo.

Because of her age, Carl was held at Lincoln State Hospital rather than at a jail.

Both Carl and Starkweather at first said she was a captive of the former Lincoln garbage collector on his murder trail through Nebraska and Wyoming.

But Starkweather later reversed his story and now claims Carl was a "willing accomplice" in his murder marathon.

West Virginia's record also is proof that you don't need one hot shot to hit the top. Because Schaus tried it the last three years, when he missed his offense on "Hot Rod" Humbley, and the best club could do was a seventh place ranking nationally last year.

"We don't have one boy in the first 50 in scoring," says Athletic Director Red Brown. "But we've scored more than 100 points five times and have a team shooting average of 43.6. We have speed, experience, poise, depth and balance—plus a free-lance offense in which all the boys can do everything from the all-court press to a zone defense."

It's a good club. It broke North Carolina's amazing streak of 27 victories, performed the unheard-of feat of beating Kentucky at its home court, came from 14 points back with eight minutes to play in whipping Villanova, scored 18 points in four minutes against Canisius and won the O. N. A. Bowl Classic and the Kentucky Invitational.

And, playing something else, only two of the boys are from outside of West Virginia.

25.—WVNYRK (UP)— West Virginia is battling for the mythical national championship today with a "no star" team which could change the entire concept of collegiate basketball coaching.

For years the overworked coaching concept has been that all a team needed was one star. Usually a skyscraping backboard artist, he was "fed" by the rest of the team and as he went to the ball club.

It provided an era of one-man teams.

The NCAA champions in five of the past six years proved this to be somewhat less than a theory.

Last year, North Carolina won with Lennie Rosenbush as its key man. The two previous years it was San Francisco with 6-foot-10 Bill Russell. Before that it was LaSalle with Tom Gola with comparatively starless Indiana interrupting a precedent set by Kansas and Clyde Lovellette.

Duke's "wonder man" was "The Sill" Chamberlain of Kansas while other "one-man teams" include such as Cincinnati with Oscar Robertson and Seattle with Elgin Baylor.

But while West Virginia is right up at the top, West Virginia's no-star aggregation has held the top spot most of the season and dropped into second place today only after losing to Duke, which brings to mind a conversation with Frank McGuire, North Carolina's straight-talking court coach, on the day of the West Virginia-Duke game.

"Duke, playing on its home court, will beat West Virginia tonight," McGuire predicted. "You can't imagine how tough it is to face Duke in Durham. That's the partisan crowd of 'em all and it's practically an impossibility to beat 'em there."

Duke beat previously undefeated West Virginia, 72 to 69.

CHAPTER XXXII

"You hint at treachery?" Milo Biglow asked, his eyes steady on Ward Sebastian.

"Call it so," Sebastian said firmly. "They've experienced plenty of such from us, so it would only be natural for them to decide to give us some of the same in return. As I read the signs, everything points to a Modoc decision to fight this thing to a finish; even to virtual extinction for themselves."

Milo Biglow buried his thoughts in a cloud of cigar smoke, and when he spoke his tone was subdued.

"In the lava-bed fighting we haven't fared too well, have we?"

"We've taken a complete and costly beating," Sebastian said bluntly. "And it's not too hard to believe that perhaps it is the inevitable price of some of our past misdeeds, now catching up with us."

Milo Biglow made a quick turn. "Ward, I've said you had a way of being pointedly realistic. Sometimes you are almost disgustingly so."

"Sorry, sir. But I never could see any sense in trying to deny facts."

"Facts," Biglow murmured. "I've considerable respect for them myself. But facing them can be a trifle upsetting at times. However, I appreciate your dropping in, Ward."

Milo Biglow poured the drinks then stood before the hearth, staring at the flames while he warmed his glass with his cupped hands. When he spoke, his words were barely audible, a man voicing his thoughts.

"There is little point or profit in being identified with a project doomed to failure. I believe I can best serve the future by remaining where I am. But—will Washington ever beckon again?"

He covered his doubt with braggery. When, a little later, Ward Sebastian left, he carried conviction that there would be no serving on a peace commission by Milo Biglow.

At no time during the short evening had there been sign or mention of Anne. Yet Sebastian was certain she was in the house, because of the several lighted upstairs windows and because of his own trusted instincts.

Well, he knew no regret at not seeing her.

At the ranch, Sebastian found a relieved and happy household, with Phil Ashland sufficiently recovered to be propped up in bed and take interest in solid nourishment.

Kitty Dutra, her full, dark beauty a soft and caressing thing, was ever at the bedside, and she and Phil had a way of looking at each other that closed out every one else. Waiting his chance, Sebastian drew her aside.

"This perhaps, I should have told you before, Kitty," he said gravely. "But with the concern over Phil I didn't want to add to the load."

She faced him steadily, her dark eyes intent. "What is it, Ward?"

"It seems I'm always bringing you the rough word. First, it was about Nick. Now it's your brother, Yancey. He went into the lava-bed battle with some other civilian volunteers. He never came out, Kitty. And he died a good man."

She flinched slightly, a line of pallor flooding her cheeks.

"You—you saw him?"

"And spoke with him. Neither he nor I realized it at the time, but that day Yancey McCloud did his sister a great service. That day, though packing a mortal wound himself, Yancey found Phil Ashland, when Phil was down and crying for water. And Yancey gave Phil water he could have used himself, and so helped keep Phil alive until Sam and I came along with our stretcher. One big reason why that boy in the next room is with us, is because Yancey McCloud measured up big when it counted. You can be proud of his memory, Kitty."

She wept softly. "Did he have any word for me?"

"For you only and particularly. He asked that he be remembered and remembered well."

"He turned away blindly. 'He will be—he will be—'"

Later, subdued but calm, she was again at Phil Ashland's bedside, watching while he slept.

Out in the kitchen, Connie Ashland spoke to Sebastian ruefully.

"In a world of their own, those two. All I'm good for is to run errands and keep out of the way. And I can remember, not very long ago, when I was the cherished young sister, the main feminine concern in Phil's life. Now I'm a rank outsider."

"You're just feeling a little too sorry for yourself."

"Perhaps," Connie admitted, smiling back at him. "I'm really very happy for both of them. Kitty's a grand person. I admit being doubtful at first, but no longer. For that matter," she went on, turning a little grave,

Woman Fatally Shot at Police Blockade

PADUCAH, Ky. (UP)—A young woman was shot to death at a state police roadblock in neighboring Graves County early today when the car in which she and three other persons were riding was mistaken for that of a fleeing gunman.

Jewell English, 24, Paducah, was shot to death when the car in which she was riding with two brothers and a friend failed to stop at the roadblock, manned by Missouri state police trooper Vernon Hopkins.

McCracken County Sheriff D.C. Buck Tucker said Forrest McAlister, a Fulton, Ky., motorist stopped earlier at the roadblock fired the shots which struck Miss English.

He and McAlister claimed Hopkins ordered him to fire at the fleeing car, but Hopkins denied issuing such instructions. Hopkins had fired at the car's tires before McAlister allegedly took a rifle from one of the police cars and opened fire.

Both shots struck Miss English in the back.

Would Shelve Plans for a Super Carrier

By JOHN A. GOLDSMITH

WASHINGTON (UP)—A republican senator recommended today that the United States abandon plans for new super aircraft carriers and concentrate on missile-firing atomic submarines.

Sen. Norris Cotton (N.H.) said the undersea craft are "the most potent and powerful of all the new space-age weapons" and every dollar spent on them would buy more security than $10 spent on carriers.

He outlined the proposal as the Senate opened debate on President Eisenhower's request for an extra $1,260,000,000 to finance a defense

"I find myself changing my opinion on a number of things. Realities can do that to one, and this is nothing if not a land of realities, some of them very stark ones. For instance, you worry me."

"I worry you! In what way?"

"I'm remembering a man you spoke of, once, and what your avowed intentions were toward him. A man named Provo Holt."

A touch of remoteness settled over Sebastian. His reply was guarded.

"I've seen nothing of him since the day I ran him off this ranch. 'Ah! But you will. There are inevitabilities about some things, and I feel that way about this."

WAGES OF SIN?—This weed-grown field, near the center of Columbus, is where Ohio Penitentiary buries its unclaimed dead. When the cemetery was established in 1840 it was a restful grassy spot, far removed from city traffic and debris. Today it is weed-covered, and littered with broken bottles, wind-swept paper and garbage. Some of the older graves have no markers. Some of the headstones have been broken and crushed by vandals. Prison officials say they try to keep the cemetery tidy, but Warden Ralph W. Alvis explains, "We can't keep a man out there all the time."

COLD COURSE—While most of the nation's students are burning midnight oil preparing for final exams, Jim Johnson, University of Michigan student, does his homework through a hole in the ice. Part of his studies include making dives under the ice of a lake near the Ann Arbor campus, to see where the fish are and what they are doing under the wintry conditions.

The measure, already approved by the House, would provide for an expansion of missile work and for more dispersal and alert facilities for the Strategic Air Command.

The bill includes funds for construction of a missile detection system and the first three atomic submarines to fire the 1500-mile Polaris missile. It also would provide money for construction of a third intercontinental ballistic missile launching base in that country.

The bill also would authorize transfer of 150 million dollars of

Ages 60 to 70 'Dangerous' Period in Life

SCIENCE TODAY

By DELOS SMITH

NEW YORK (UP)—The real trouble of some people entering the "dangerous decade"—age 60 to 70 years—is that all channels of creative action are blocked, according to Dr. Flanders Dunbar, a leading authority of geriatrics, the science of aging.

It is the "dangerous decade" because people who get through it without acquiring some degenerative, geriatric disease have an excellent chance of living on to a very old age. If only people entering the decade could meet "stress" as the adolescent does, bar.

"Physiologically, the best release of emotional tension and the anxiety aroused in the stress situation is action," he said. "This is the release chosen by healthy adolescents, and as long as they do not come to grief as the result of ill-considered action they are unlikely to become ill."

Become Sickly

"It is those for whom all channels of creative action are blocked that become the sickly ones. The same is true for those in the dangerous age, but the barriers to creative action which they confront are more than parental restraint and code.

"They must face the mass conviction that for them life is over, that from now on they are of no particular use and the best they can do is to amuse themselves and try not to become a nuisance."

He saw as a principal ingredient of any recipe for long life the ability to maintain a harmonious balance of mind and body. One attribute of this ingredient is "avoiding frustration." He cited his own study of persons who lived 100 years or longer.

These persons showed positive life-long genius in that regard. They "escaped conflict with authority," often by being their own bosses, yet they had little "desire to boss others."

Work Long and Hard

"They have worked long hours and hard, but usually managed not to have to punch the time clock," Dunbar continued in a communication to the American Geriatrics Society. "Unlike the typical victim of hypertension,

Hearing Scheduled by AHC at Ft. Smith

FORT SMITH (UP)—The Arkansas Highway Commission has scheduled a public hearing here Feb. 12 to consider the location of the interstate highway access road connecting Fort Smith and Van Buren with the interstate route from Little Rock to Oklahoma City.

Raymond Orr, a member of the commission, announced the meeting Wednesday.

A hearing previously set by the commission several months ago was postponed at the request of properly owners who asked more time to prepare their data for the commission. The same group asked the commission last week to set the new date.

they are rarely interested in getting to the top. They like people and appear to be well-liked. They are sociable and have a sense of humor, but they are disinclined to argue. They are good fighters about major issues but they are not combative about little annoyances and disagreements."
